

Sunday, September 25

September 25 already is the last hin&herzo Culture Festival day. Of course this doesn't mean that the program is any less varied or filled with perspectives.

CHILDREN'S CONCERT: RAKETEN ERNA »I DON'T CARE, I'LL JUST LEAVE IT LIKE THAT«

©Sascha Sichert

Cheeky and clever texts, rock melodies, folk rhythms and an always authentic performance: The three musicians from Berlin who's combo name means "Rocket Erna" wave the musical rainbow flag with their album. With their song "What you may never stop doing" they want to encourage even the youngest listeners to question things. Modern music for children that also delights grown-ups.

A modern story confronting the rationality of adults with the perspective of a child: August Zirner and Kai Struwe have created a very special performance of the Little Prince as a story about friendship and humanity. Grimme Award winner Zirner tells the story; Struwe (among other things bass player in the band of Helge Schneider) is the composer and plays the jazzy sounds to the pictures by Antoine de Saint-Exupéry (accompanied by August Zirner playing the flute).

©Robert Maschke

“Laughing First, Thinking Second!” Ingmar Stadelmann is a stand-up comedian who has won multiple awards; he puts his finger into the wounds of society where it really hurts - not only with the names of his shows. A rebel, straightforward, never mincing the matters: Always according to the motto “Laughing First, Thoughts Second” he leads his audience from explosions of laughter to pauses to think. Ingmar Stadelmann wants to open windows in our minds. Verschissmus is not only a play of words to him.
